ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The completion of this Master's thesis would not have been possible without the generous assistance of numerous individuals who either contributed directly to this work or to my life in a variety of different ways.

First, I would like to thank my thesis advisor, Associate Professor Dr. Payung Cedar for her invaluable help and constant encouragement throughout every stage of my thesis, as well as continuous proofreading of my drafts. This thesis would not have been completed without all the support I have received from her.

I am sincerely grateful to the entire thesis committee; Associate Professor Dr. Usa Padgate, Dr. Apichai Rungrueng, Dr. Sasitorn Chantharothai and Dr. Taweesak Kunyot, for providing me with beneficial comments and invaluable suggestions. Special thanks to Dr. Sudsuang Yutdhana who dedicated her time to support my thesis with her statistical analysis expertise. I would also like to extend additional notes of appreciation to Associate Professor Dr. Wattana Padgate, Dr. Narat Kanprachar and Mr. Lars Anders Cedar for their helpful suggestions and corrections on the questionnaire of this thesis.

In addition, I would like to thank Dr. Thitirat Suwannasom and Mr. Richard Michael Glover for permitting me to collect valuable data in their classes. My gratitude also goes to Mr. Jeffrey Verdier and Mr. Thomas Bell, who helped me with data coding. Moreover, thanks are due to all participants involved in this thesis.

My deepest appreciation is also given to Mr. Varittha Jiranurak, Miss Amy Pothong and Miss Sirinya Srichompoo who were always available to offer words of encouragement, provide meaningful advice, or to lend a friendly ear whenever I needed to talk.

Special thanks also go out to the members of my family including my parents, Mr. Nikom and Mrs. Nichagan Iemtom, for the love, patience, and invaluable support they have provided me throughout my life.

Finally, I would also like to thank those whose names are not mentioned in this acknowledgement. They encouraged and inspired me towards the completion of this thesis.
